out of his bones. Not his own notion. Silence had come. Then Losen cursed and cried, and his slaves brought him wine, and the mage went out, bowing, and checking as he went to be sure that the spell of paralysis was holding. "So we must follow her?" the Herbal asked. Those they hired were in truth slaves, having only their masters to safeguard them from rival. "Will be yours," he said, with an open laugh, so that Losen stared at him in a kind of horror, that lived long, long before Erreth-Akbe, before Morred, before there were people in Earthsea. He smiled again. "You're a beautiful woman," he said, but plainly, not in the flattering way he had used with her at first, before she showed him she hated it. "Why would you be a man?" stranger.
